What of the Hog Crop! Messrs. Henry Milward & Co., in presenting a report of the information obtained from some of the country packing points regarding the incoming crop of hogs, say: It appears that in Thinois 27 points re-port the crop as larger, 5 about the same and 3 smaller than last year. In Indians, 19 larger, 10 about the same, 9 smaller In Iowa, 18 larger, 4 about the same, 6 smal-ler. In Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, 7 larger, 2 about the same and 3 smaller. It is not surprising that almost uniformly the reports predict a very considerable in-crease in the supply of hogs now feeding for the winter market, as the prospects for a bounteous corn crop have all along been so promising that the farmers have husbanded their stock hogs to enable them to take advantage of the probable surplus of the cereal. Their bopes have not been disappointed; the corn crop is out of dan-ger of frost, and will certainly be one of the largest and best secured we have ever had. The farmers have lately cared but little to market their hogs, confident that much more money could be realized for them later in the season, when fattened fully on the new crop of corn; and stock hogs have been much sought after and have umanded very high prices. The experience of the packing business the past season has demonstrated the fact that even with the most flattering prospects high prices can not safely be paid for hogs. The farmers last year secured the whole benefit of the trade. The most conservative packer could not possibly save himself from loss, while the speculative operators during the early part of the season were all buried later in one common ruin. The result of last season's operations were not particularly gratifying to any concerned, except the farmers. The English markets for bacon were sustained solely by the sudden decline of gold in the spring, thus shutting off all shipments and preventing any accepts 126,000 bushels; winter red and cumulation of stock, but still considerable amber Western 1.30@1.33. Molarce Although our receipts of summer hogshave been smaller than last year's, and though our packing throughout the country has been much less than usual, the supply has been constantly more than equal to the demand, and, contrary to general anticipation the markets have been, for the last two months, gradually declining. The con-sumption has, however, been largely stimulated under the influence of low prices, and it is probable that before any new meat can be brought to market the stock of old extra winter 4.25@4;45. Wheat-demand will be entirely exhausted. Still, the de-

Under such circumstances low prices for hogs must be insisted on, or the packers had better close their houses and allow the crop to be monopolized by a few of the nost adventurous. The receipts of live hogs for nine months during the three past years sum up as fol-lows, viz: In 1868, 888,720; in 1869, 1,-043,884, and 1870, 991,453; while the shipments for the corresponding periods were In 1868, 684,417; in 1868, 1869, 856,506, and in 1870, 679,288 The return of the Registrar General for Ireland shows an increase this year of 377,-108 hogs, and 62,705 horned cattle as com pared with last, so that in all probability American bacon and beef can not be used n Great Britain the coming season, except at very low prices. Our advices from Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia, disclose the fact that the negroes, for some time back, have been putting up pig sties, and are fattening one or more hogs to a family, which will furnish them with early meat, and seriously reduce the quantity of bacon heretofore required for those States, and cannot but exercise an immense influence and prove an important item in determin ing the result of next year's business.
